

E-Book Resources

County Library Systems

All county library systems have e-books available to card holders.

If you don't already have a library card, some are offering short-term card sign-ups by email. Each county is handling this differently, so check the website for your county and/or municipality of residence. Also, please be patient. Libraries are physically closed and staff are manning electronic communication remotely – many with limited “computer power” at home since many libraries use desktops on site, therefore many staff that are able to work are using their own devices to connect in.

Provided here are the webpages to the County library systems. You may also find helpful resources if you check the local library website as well. E-books are available through OverDrive or Libby and some can be delivered to Kindle (if available, this is an option once you have “checked out” the book).

For updates on electronic access, consider subscribing to your local library e-newsletter and/or follow them on social media. Some are making more digital content available through other sources and that info has not yet made it to the websites. For example, for Tredyffrin Township libraries (part of Ccls), Tumblebooks (kids/teen content) is temporarily available but the only way I have found to access it is through a link in a recently issued newsletter.

Chester County Library System

<http://www.ccls.org> This is the main page for the county library system. If you have a card already, follow the button on the main page for “e-books” or “e-resources”. If you need a card, there is another button for “CCLS Online Resources Available” and there are instructions and links to help.

Delaware County Library System

<http://www.delcolibraries.org>

This is the main page for the county library system. On this page, you'll find a button for “DOWNLOAD e-books and audiobooks”. This will take you to page to access Overdrive, Tumblebooks (a kids/teens online ebook source), Libby and others.

Montgomery County Library System

<Http://www.mclinc.org>

From this main page, use the button for “digital”. Once on that page, scroll down to “downloads” for a button to connect to Overdrive e-books.

Archive.org

<Http://www.archive.org>

Internet Archive is a non-profit library of millions of free books, movies, software, music, websites, and more. They are making their collection available for free during the current crisis. You will need to set up an account. The books are available read in their own on-line reader. Some older books/classics are available here for free that are not found in the free e-books from the local library.

JSTOR.org

Http://www.jstor.org JournalSTORage. This online resource is primarily used in university and other research settings with journals, books and primary source collections. Not for the casual, let's pick up a book reading session, but normally much of their content that is not already in the public domain can only be accessed on a very limited basis or else with a paid subscription or as part of university library access. Right now, it is available for free so if there is some more scholarly content anyone is interested in, take a look.

Hopefully what you are seeking is available from a completely free source (above) but if not....

Amazon.com and Kindle Unlimited

Of course, you can buy books (hard copy) from Amazon.com or download e-books (paid) and some free to Amazon Prime members to your Kindle or Kindle app on any device. Now might be the time to consider doing a 30-day free trial of Kindle Unlimited. PSA - make a note of the date to remember to cancel if its not all you hoped it would be!

NOOK

With a NOOK reader or app on any device, BarnesandNoble.com offers digital content. Just like with Kindle, most of it is paid but there are some free or very inexpensive "specials" that you can pick up.

Audible.com

Listening to the book rather than reading it more your speed? Just link with Kindle Unlimited, audible.com offers a 30-day free trial too.
